“Brainport Eindhoven, I love it”

1. Please briefly introduce yourself.

Hi, I am Jim Weiss, Director of Events for NumFOCUS, Inc. NumFOCUS is a nonprofit organization based in the U.S. that supports a global community of users and developers of open source scientific computing tools. I live in Austin, Texas but enjoy traveling around the world to meet with our community members.

2. What was the goal of your visit to Eindhoven?

To meet with community leaders from across Europe for a 1-day summit hosted by NumFOCUS.

3. How did you experience traveling to Eindhoven?

Super easy! I had a direct flight to Amsterdam and was immediately able to get on a 90-minute train ride from the airport to the town center of Eindhoven.

4. What is the best experience while visiting Eindhoven?

We were able to take a tour of the Philips Stadium to see the facilities, locker rooms, and pitch. Super cool to have access to a stadium like that. We are hosting a summer conference there, and being able to host an event at a venue as cool as PSV will bring attendees from around the world.

5. Do you want to add something?

As an American, I don't take for granted the access of having a transit system like the Netherlands offers you. We don't have a rail system nearly as developed, and I really appreciated how easy and cheap it was to travel from one city to another.
